MARCH 2019

Principal's Message

March Break is just around the corner. This will be a week to find balance between structure and freedom for your children. They will have reached a point in their school year where they are ready for a break from the daily grind, and they will want to enjoy their freedom from the schedule. However, their need for structure will still persist. Before long, they'll be asking "what can I do now?". I encourage families to plan ahead for the March Break, spending some time talking about the possible activities that could be pursued during the week. An emphasis on balancing indoor and outdoor activities will help to avoid the "video game trap". Whatever plans you do make, I hope you find some time to include reading for pleasure. A simple trip to the book store or library is always a good way to break up the week, while promoting literacy as a family.
